

Frequently Asked Questions:

1. What do Behavior Support Services include?

Behavior Support Services include the assessment process, behavior plan development, consultation, and behavior support implementation and training.

2. Would my decision to either continue Behavior Support Services from Arc Southern Maryland or change to SEEC affect my current services?

The decision you make does not have any effect on the current services you receive from SEEC. In other words, this is an additional service that SEEC will provide and will in no way impact the other services received.

3. What advantages could there be to switching Behavior Support Services to SEEC?

SEEC believes that by providing Behavior Support Services to those we are already supporting in other service areas, we can ensure more consistency in our support to people. We believe Direct Support Professionals will be better trained to implement the behavior plan and will have in-house education should they need more training.

4. If we choose to make a change, when would the transition take place?

We are offering people we support and their legal guardians the choice to move to SEEC Behavior Support Services when the behavior plan needs to be renewed or during the Person-Centered Planning Process.

5. Where can I receive more information or have questions answered in regard to this change?

Should you have any further concerns or would like to request more information, feel free to contact Lori Sedlezky, Director of Knowledge Management at (301) 576-9040 or lsedlezky@seeconline.org.
